About RQIA

RQIA is the independent body responsible for monitoring and inspecting the availability and quality of health and social care services in Northern Ireland, and encouraging improvements in the quality of those services. RQIA's main functions are:

- to inspect the quality of services provided by health and social care (HSC) bodies in Northern Ireland through reviews of clinical and social care governance arrangements within these bodies;
- to regulate (register and inspect) a wide range of services delivered by HSC bodies and by the independent sector. The regulation of services is based on minimum care standards to ensure that service users know what quality of services they can expect to receive, and service providers have a benchmark against which to measure their quality; and
- from 1 April 2009, with the transfer of functions of the Mental Health Commission to the RQIA under the Health and Social Care (Reform) Bill, we will undertake a new range of responsibilities for people with a mental illness and those with a learning disability. These include: preventing ill treatment; remedying any deficiency in care or treatment; terminating improper detention in a hospital or guardianship; and preventing or redressing loss or damage to a patient's property.
